

Atlee takes three out of four

KINGSWOOD EC

By Jo Prestwich

KATE Atlee was on blistering form at Kingswood, Staffs, winning three of the four classes. Two of the wins, at advanced medium and advanced 100, came with Sarah Outwin's Lochness, who was making his first appearance since the nationals, where he competed at advanced medium.

Kate also took the medium on her own Gribaldi gelding, Stein. Kate, who is sponsored by Pegasus Arenas, has ridden Lochness since the winter championships.

"He's such a fantastic chap to have around," she said. "I love riding him and the plan is to move up to PSG after Christmas."

Stein was also out after a break, his last outing being the north west regionals.

"It didn't go quite to plan there," said Kate, who bought Stein as a five-year-old from Dane Rawlins. "But I was pleased with him today, it was only his third medium test and hopefully I'll get him qualified for the winters, although, as usual, I've left it a bit late in the day."

Tracy Tomlinson was the one to beat at the highest level, finishing first and second in the prix st georges/intermediaire I and II pick-a-test with her own Faberge II

"He's such a fantastic chap to have around," says Kate Atlee of Lochness and Penny Stern's Westpoint Fabriano. The home-bred Faberge II has had a three-year sabbatical from dressage, returning to competition during the summer.

"She's a 'point and steer' ride," said Tracy, who is on her third generation of home-breds as Gigi's

Dimaggio daughter produced a Rubinstein N foal this year.

"I hope her offspring take after her, she's always on your side."
